A Better Balance Story

Pregnant in New York?

A Guide to Your Workplace Rights During and After Pregnancy

If you work in New York, this guide will walk you through your rights and options:

During Pregnancy | After Birth | Returning to Work

If you have questions, call A Better Balance's free, confidential legal helpline at 1-833-NEW-LAW-2 (1-833-639-5292) or fill out our online help form.

Inside, get started with this quick checklist:

I cannot wait to pregnant!

Do I have my rights at work?

Do I have a written policy on pregnancy?

Do you need a clear picture of your rights? Do you have questions about pregnancy? Think about:

- Do I need a reasonable accommodation? Do I need time off?
- Do I need a record me to take time off for doctor's visits or for other appointments I may have?

Have you taken steps to protect your pregnancy? Think about:

- Have I told my employer that I am pregnant?
- Have I told my employer that I need leave and when?
- Have I applied for disability or PFL? Temporary Disability Insurance (paid benefits)?

Have you taken steps to protect your parental leave? Think about:

- Have I told my employer that I plan to take parental leave?
- Have I told my employer when I plan to return to work?

If there is another parent, have I told my employer the time I will be off work?

Have I talked to my employer about my plans for childcare upon and how I will balance my work and family life when I return to work?

Do you need a change to your work schedule, duties, or environment to continue working safely during pregnancy? Think about:

- Have I asked my boss for a reasonable accommodation?
- Have I requested my pregnancy related workplace concerns in writing from my doctor?

Do you need a light duty assignment because of your pregnancy complications? Think about:

- Have I asked my boss for a reasonable accommodation?
- Have I proposed my application for PFL or Temporary Disability Insurance (paid benefits)?
- Have I given my health care provider's recommendation in writing?
- Will I need a loved one to take time off to care for me?

Have you given birth, or miscarried, or ended your pregnancy? Think about:

- Have I applied for PFL or Temporary Disability Insurance (paid benefits) for bonding time?
- Have I given my employer enough notice for PFL or Temporary Disability Insurance (paid benefits)?
- Have I proposed my application for PFL or Temporary Disability Insurance (paid benefits)?
- Have I given my health care provider's recommendation in writing?
- Will I need a loved one to take time off to care for me?

Returning to Work? Think about:

- Do I need a plan to protect my extended appointments or breastfeeding?
- Do I need a schedule, and time and break time to pump milk?

Have you taken steps to protect your parental leave? Think about:

- Have I told my employer that I plan to return to work?
- Have I told my employer when I plan to return to work?

Your Rights During Pregnancy

While You're Pregnant

While you're pregnant, you might need a change in your job duties or work environment to stay healthy.

NY workers have the right to reasonable accommodations for conditions related to pregnancy and childbirth.

Pursuant New York State Human Rights Law, to get extra rest or bathroom breaks, breaks to sit or drink water, a stool or a temporary transfer to a less strenuous or safer job. Learn more about reasonable accommodations.

Pregnant? Use this letter to request initial limited in pregnancy or childbirth, unless doing so would cause your employer an "undue hardship."

How to use: Tell your boss you need a change to your job. Your employer must give you the time needed.

Pregnant? Use this letter to request a reasonable accommodation for a pregnancy-related medical need.

Pregnant? Use this letter to request a reasonable accommodation for a pregnancy-related medical need.

Pregnant? Use this letter for prenatal or postnatal accommodations, such as time off, extra breaks, or moving other duties. Learn more about when you need a doctor's note.

Pregnant? Use this letter to request a reasonable accommodation for pregnancy or childbirth